

Gross Mendelsohn leaders attend BKR meeting in Germany

For immediate release: November 5, 2007

Baltimore, MD – David Goldner, CPA, CFP, CVA, and Lawrence McCanna, CPA, partners at Gross, Mendelsohn & Associates, participated in discussions on the opportunities for collaboration among accounting firms at the Annual Worldwide Meeting of BKR International, a global association of CPA and consulting firms.

“Domestic and international collaboration and organizational education are key for the future growth and success of accounting firms. We learned the importance of collaboration among functional groups and organizations, and how these efforts will help our firm become even more productive and innovative, while extending greater resources to clients,” said Lawrence McCanna, CPA, managing partner of Gross Mendelsohn. More than 100 partners from 64 firms from around the world attended the meeting in Germany in late October.
